HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Friday Dec. 19, 1862—Evening.

All has been quiet to-day, excepting two shots fired from our hillside batteries to disperse the gathering of bands of Rebels on the plain opposite.

The enemy strongly picket the river along our front, and maintain a peaceful condition with our men on this side.

Several members of the Committee on the Conduct of the War of the Senate and House of Representatives were here to-day examining into the causes of the recent repulse and evasion of the southern side of the Rappahannock. They are guests of Gen. Sumner to-night.

Official reports of our losses in the late battle make the number less than has been reported, being less than 1,400 killed and 8,000 wounded. A large portion of the wounded were only slightly hurt. We lost 800 prisoners, and took about as many.

Special Dispatch to the N. Y. Tribune.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 19, 1862.

The following dispatches were received from your correspondent, dated

HEADQUARTERS, Thursday, Dec. 18, 1862.

The Richmond Dispatch of the 16th says the Rebels lost in Saturday's battle at Fredericksburg was 2,500. Eleven hundred wounded had arrived at Richmond, and were on the way there, on Monday night. They lost Gens. Gregg and Cobb and many field officers. The 3d South Carolina Regiment was nearly annihilated. It also states that the Rebel positions back of Fredericksburg are impregnable.

HEADQUARTERS, RICHMOND DIVISION, Thursday, Dec. 18, 1862.

The truce for the burial of the dead closed this evening and Col. Brooks and party returned to this side. 600 of our dead were buried yesterday and 415 to-day.

Nearly all the dead were found stripped of their clothing and lying naked upon the ground. From the official reports of our casualties it is found that the proportion of killed to the wounded in the late battle is much smaller than at Antietam, and by many officers it is thought to be much less than that of any other battle fought during the war.

In the corps of Gen. Reynolds the losses, as officially reported to day, are as follows:

In Gen. Doubleday's Division..... 190

In Gen. Gibbons' Division..... 1,400

In Gen. Meade's Division..... 2,300

Total..... 4,290
